Ode to my little granddaighter,Dianne West.

Sweetest little Rosebud,
Sent from heaven to me
Come to cheer my sadness,
Fill with joy and glee.
Lie upon my bosom,
Smile into my face;
Let your joy and laughter
All my grief efface.

Chorus:

Sweet little Rosebud,
Grandma's name for you;
'Cause your cheeks are lovely
With a rosy hue.
Lips two dainty-petals
Like the roses too;
Altogether lovely
With your eyes so blue!

We shall all be happy
When our hearts unite
By the bond you bring us
If our hearts are right.
May the love of Jesus
Sweeten all our lives
By the Love He shows us
In your deep blue eyes.

Chorus:Sweet little Rosebud;
Grandma's name for you,
'Cause your cheeks are lovely
With a rosy hue.
Lips two dainty petals
Like the roses too;
Altogether lovely
With your eyes so blue!

May the glowing ringlets
Of your locks so fair,
Twine around our heartstrings
Till we gather there
In your home of sunshine,
Just because you're there,
Shining like a diamond
Tinted,Oh, so rare.

When my heart is lonely
How I long for you
With your happy antics,
Tying up my shoe.
May you always love me
And to me be true,
As your Grandma loves you
And will, to you be true.

Tune "Sweetest Bunch Of Violets".

Wednesday Funeral Held For Willis Josiah West, Pioneer Resident Here

Willis Josiah West, 86, member of a pioneer Oregon family and resident of the coast area for many years, died June 18 at the Seaside hospital. He had previously been a patient at a nursing home and in failing health for some time. Funeral services were Wednesday, 1:30 p.m. at the Seaside chapel of Hughes-Ransom mortuary, with Rev. Hugh Mitchelmore of the Clatsop Plains Presbyterian church officiating. Burial was in Ocean View cemetery.

Born October 3, 1869, near Hillsboro, he had his schooling there and at Willamette University. He married Lila P. Ross January 1, 1909, in Portland.

After leaving school, he assisted his father, Josiah West, on a ranch near Hillsboro for several years, then went to Nome, Alaska, as a gold miner for two years. Returning to Oregon, he operated a logging business until 1908, then moved to Marysville, California, where he owned and operated a fruit ranch and a dairy farm. In 1913, he came to Clatsop county and bought land on the Necanicum south of Seaside where he operated a large dairy and a milk route. He sold the route in 1929 and continued to operate the dairy farm until 1942.

For two years in the forties, he was employed at the Commercial Iron Works, then bought a small farm in Eastern Oregon where he lived for about a year before returning to Seaside in 1949 to retire.

Survivors include a son, Chester, Tillamook; a daughter, Mrs. Arthur J. (Violet) Kaser, Cleveland, Ohio; a brother, Paul, Seaside, and four sisters: Mrs. Daisy Fulkerson, Seaside; Mrs. Anson (Maude) Prescott, Mrs. Seth (Rose) Johnson and Mrs. Harold (Violet) See, all of Clatsop Plains, and two grandchildren.

Casket bearers were Tennes Mathisen, Ray Earl, J. O. McCoy, Clarence Owen, Howard Johnson and Charles Bany. Honorary pallbearers were John Selnes, E. H. Jurd, E. T. Stafford, Albert Johnson, John Sundquist and John Ostman.

Woman Jumps From Bridge

The body of Mrs. Lila Pearl West, about 70, Cannon Beach, was recovered from the Necanicum river Friday night shortly after she apparently leaped from Avenue A bridge.

Coroner Raymond Luce said the Seaside police recovered the body after her coat and hat had been found on the Avenue A bridge.

Mrs. West, who lived alone in Cannon Beach, left a diary indicating that she planned to take her own life. The diary revealed a previous attempt last April 17, when she tried to burn herself but succeeded only in hurting her hands and ankles.

Friday night she went to Seaside, registering at a hotel under the name Lila Shaffer. She left the hotel at 10:45 Monday night. The hat and coat were found on the bridge at 11.

Mrs. West leaves a son, Chester, Seaside, and a daughter, Mrs. A. J. Kaser, Portland.

The body is in charge of the Luce funeral home.

John Williams, taxi driver, found the coat and hat left by Mrs. West on the bridge. He reported to police immediately and Bruce Linkous of the Speedcraft rides joined police in the search with his boat. He found Mrs. West's body floating near the Broadway bridge.

Seaside firemen attempted resuscitation without success.

Reflections of an Ornery
Country Kid, by Paul See

OCK#41 THE GREAT DEER HUNT

Most boys growing up in the country back during the depression years fancied themselves as great hunter/trappers. I had experienced great success in my pre-teen years, hunting ducks on Neacoxie Lake and trapping moles with government supplied traps. Each mole nose delivered to the County Clerk earned me a dime. But that had gotten old by the time I was in high school. I had to find something more challenging than blasting ducks and snipping the sniffers off moles. I guess it was just after our senior year that classmate John Carlson and I decided to try our hand at deer hunting in eastern Oregon. And typical of many other events in the life of this ornery country kid, it was a disaster.

From the very beginning, things went wrong. Johnnie's old 1937 Hudson Terraplane pickup got sick before we reached Seaside's city limits, and we decided to hole up in a fleabag motel overnight while a mechanic glued the engine back together. That tacky old motel is still there, and I hope they've changed the sheets at least once since we were their guests. As it turned out, that evening was the highlight of the trip. We walked to the Prom late in the evening and abruptly witnessed one of the most spectacular meteor showers of the 20th. Century. It lasted over an hour. The sky was filled with myriad trails of fire, each slowly fading into the darkness. We were sure this was an omen of good luck on our hunting adventure. Optimism sometimes overwhelms good sense.

We set out the next morning for my uncle Bill West's new home in mountainous Grant County, east of Kimberly. Uncle Bill had retired from his dairy farm in the Necanicum valley, and had built a small cabin in this terribly isolated little corner of Oregon.
It took us all day to get there, but he had been advised of our visit, and had a big pot of pork and beans waiting for us, boiling on his old wood stove. Uncle bill was truly a survivor. As a teen-ager he had suffered a terrible shotgun blast to his shoulder and face when he was leaning on his gun. Tappan Stafford, a visiting family's baby, had reached up and pulled the trigger. Uncle Bill's face was horribly disfigured, an eye was missing, his sinuses dripped continuously, and what original skin remained on his left brow revealed numerous little blue bumps enclosing lead pellets. Yet he recovered, and spent a lifetime as a father and active farmer. I guess lead wasn't poisonous back in those days.

Uncle Bill insisted on preparing coffee for his new visitors. As we watched him dump a fist full of coffee grounds into a boiling kettle of water, we couldn't miss the fact that his nose was dribbling into the kettle, too. Fortunately, there were open cracks in the wood floor under the table, and I'm sure he never knew where that coffee went. After a night of rest and a coffee-free breakfast, uncle Bill mapped out a route to a ridge where he was sure we could find deer. We couldn't wait to set out for the kill.

My uncle was right. This place was crawling with deer and hunters, and shots were ringing out every few minutes. We stopped on a ridge top, and soon saw a bullet tear a groove through the dirt right in front of us. But there was a larger problem. The old pickup's engine had started to clunk rather ominously, and John decided to head back to civilization for repairs. We set out my gear and I remained on the ridge where I could easily see the valleys below. John promised me he'd be back in the morning. He just hadn't specified which morning.

Before long, a large four-point buck wandered into my sights down in the valley, and I got him with a single shot. Wow! I was really a successful hunter! But then I saw him bounced by two additional shots from another direction. I scrambled down the slope and was soon arguing with two other hunters about who had shot first. They carefully examined the carcass and to my surprise abruptly conceded that I was truly the owner of this bounty. I later understood why. That poor deer had been badly torn up inside by the several bullets. It took more than an hour to lug that carcass up to my campsite on the ridge where I hung it from a pine limb and attempted to dress it with my trusty jacknife. That's when I learned a basic principle of deer hunting. Always carry a knife that's sharp enough to slice hot butter. The best I could do was free the carcass of excess blood. Most of the innards remained in place.

Almost three days of stale water, crackers, cheese, a dead deer and millions of blowflies were becoming a bit wearing when John finally showed up. He'd clunked his way to a gas station in Dayville where he helped the operator remove the engine pan to find the problem. A piston bearing had worn to the point that the engine was on the verge of blowing up. They called Portland, and a new bearing was dispatched by bus. John put up in a motel until the replacement arrived. He and that compassionate gas station operator worked miracles on that old truck, and he eventually arrived back at the ridge. We hurriedly loaded up the deer and all my possessions, and roared out of those mountains without even stopping to thank uncle Bill for his coffee. Funny, though; I swear that carcass was much larger than when I'd lugged it up the ridge.

Of course the trip home took all day, but we both sensed a feeling of exhilaration as we passed through the Portland area with that beautiful rack of horns protruding from the back of the truck. People could see that we were truly hunters. Somewhere along the way we decided it might be wise purchase to a quantity of cracked ice to cover the deer. Then a new problem developed. The headlights began blinking on and off. But we somehow made it back to Seaside without acquiring a traffic ticket. It was well after dusk when we arrived at my home, and I immediately ran to my mother to show her our accomplishment. She took one look and directed me to bury that mess in the cow pasture right now! Well, it did stink a bit, and by now it had swollen up like a blimp. It was pretty obvious that I should have done a better job of dressing that carcass while it was hanging on the limb. Since that day, neither John nor I have ever sought our own supply of venison. I guess we just aren't dedicated hunters.
